This publication is funded in part by the South Carolina Arts Commission, which receives support from the National Endowment of the Arts, and the City of Spartanburg and the County of Spartanburg, South Carolina.
Attracting and retaining our creative talent is critical to Spartanburg being a culturally diverse and vibrant community as well as giving us a competitive edge to attract other professionals to live and work in Spartanburg County. We take this very seriously at Chapman Cultural Center and believe that artists contribute to the economic prosperity and health of our city and county. Therefore, it is imperative that we create a community where artists can thrive.

Recently, I was introduced to a young woman, Jessica Kushner, who was just hired as the new Education Program Director for the Spartanburg Science Center. She enthusiastically said, “I grew up at the Chapman Cultural Center participating in Spartanburg Youth Theater plays and Irish Step at Ballet Spartanburg’s Dance Center.” She also recalled that as a young child she followed her father all around the Science Center while he served as a volunteer on their Board of Directors. Now when she can live and work anywhere, she chose to come home to Spartanburg. Jessica graduated from Kenyon College as a double major in Biology and Film Making with a minor in Anthropology and is now responsible for connecting over 22,000+ children to STEAM education.

And have you met Adam Sanders or seen him perform on the stage at Chapman Cultural Center? Adam is the Director of Spartanburg Youth Theater and has been cast for numerous roles in Spartanburg Little Theatre performances. He leads the Youth Theatre every day to the benefit of over 11,000 children and uses his creative expertise and talents to help young aspiring actors and actresses find their own abilities and talents on the stage in four productions each year.

Both of these young adults are now making a living at Chapman Cultural Center and live in Spartanburg too. There are quite a few more of these same stories that could be told.

As we compete globally to retain and recruit talented people to our industries and corporations in Spartanburg County, we must work very hard to make sure we support our creative professionals as well. Spartanburg has been developing creative talent for more than 100 years on our stages, studios, and in the classrooms; but we have not always had a place or a culture that supports these talented people consistently to help them make a living and want to live here. Over the last five years we have been very intentional in this work, and it has resulted in more and more young people coming home because they feel welcome here and their creative talents and skills are needed.

In fiscal year 2019, the cultural sector hired more than 829 professional artists who were paid more than $1.1 million as musicians, dancers, designers, photographers, painters, glass artists, writers, choreographers, sculptors, puppeteers, ceramists, muralists, weavers, jewelers, lighting and set designers, teaching artists, and costume designers.

If artists can make a living in Spartanburg, they will stay here; and they will encourage others to come to live and work in our community. I am very excited to open Mayfair Art Studios as a division of Chapman Cultural Center where artists can go to work every day and make a living in our community and be respected as professionals for their creative skills and talents.

I encourage you to hire an artist today to make something great happen in your life, your neighborhood, or in your work! Artists are creative problem solvers; they think outside the box and are extremely resourceful. They inspire others and welcome big ideas. They are what make Spartanburg authentic, vibrant, and unique.

Help us support more artists by giving to the United Arts Campaign today.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Evins

Our Impact: Education

In-School Performances & Artist Residencies

Through Chapman Cultural Center’s Muse Machine program, schools receive three professional performances onsite during the year — one each of music, theatre, and dance. These informal performances acquaint students with a particular genre or art form by professional artists who also discuss not only the art form and presentation but what it is like to be a practicing professional artist. The Muse Machine program serves 42 schools throughout Spartanburg County (including Title I schools).

In addition, CCC sponsors one-week professional artist residencies that provide in-depth student learning opportunities directly tied to South Carolina state learning standards in both arts and academic subjects.

Advantage: Arts & Science

Each month, 2 to 3 Spartanburg County school districts display the artwork of talented young artists in our student galleries. The Coldwell Banker Caine Youth Art Galleries are free and open to the public 7 days a week and are located in the hallways of the Carlos Dupree Moseley Building.
Chapman Cultural Center is committed to broadening and strengthening Spartanburg’s cultural community. Because of this commitment, a major part of the work we do is centered around funding Spartanburg’s artists and organizations to help make the arts more accessible.

One of Chapman Cultural Center’s major funding opportunities comes in the form of our quarterly Community Grants Program. The Community Grants Program awards up to $5,000 per application and is open to both individual artists and non-profits/government agencies.

Chapman Cultural Center receives general financial support for cultural projects impacting Spartanburg County, funded in part by South Carolina Arts Commission, which receives support from the National Endowment for the Arts and the John and Susan Bennett Memorial Arts Fund of the Coastal Community Foundation of South Carolina.

Learn more about our Q2 and Q3 grant recipient’s below.

Charles Lea Center used its $1,000 grant to pay local group Bill and Tad’s Excellent Duo to play at its signature annual Road Rally fundraiser. This year the theme was Ghost Stories, and they expect 20 teams to participate in the rally with about 200 people attending the dinner afterward. All funds raised from the event benefited the Charles Lea Center.

Spartanburg Festival Chorus used their $1,500 grant for the All-Beethoven Concert they planned in order to celebrate the anniversary of Beethoven’s 250th birthday. The chorus is based at Converse College and the concert took place on November 14th at Twichell Auditorium.

Spartanburg Terrace Tenant Association used their $2,000 grant for their 40th annual talent show, An Evening of Talent Expressions. This is a showcase of local and regional talent, of all ages, in the performing arts. Prizes were awarded to the top 6 performers overall, as well as 1st place prizes for comedy, dance, drama, vocals, and music. The goals are to nurture the performer’s interest in the arts and to showcase local talent. The event was held at the Chapman Cultural Center on November 23.

Aaron Pate was awarded a $1,000 community grant towards the project, Local Takes, which aims to bring Spartanburg together by celebrating local artists and sharing their stories with the community through documentary films. This production will launch six short documentary films, each interviewing a Spartanburg artist about their life and work, their challenges and revelations, and the stories that have shaped them. Featured artists are: Addam Duncan, Beth Regula, Roderice Cardell “The Madddartist”, Lucy Boland, Andrew Blanchard, and Annette Giaco. The Local Takes premiere screening and after-party will be on February 20th at Drayton Mills, bringing the community together to celebrate their sponsors and artists.
October saw the pilot of a new Music Series downtown, Bands & Beats in Barret Park. A new music series by Elephnt Group, Synergy Music Series, is planned for the park starting this March!

Spartanburg County Parks, in partnership with Chapman Cultural Center, teamed up with local artists Frankie Zombie & Adrian Meadows to design and implement a public art installation between Cleveland Park and Berry Field.

The goals of the project were to create a brighter, safer, more pleasing walkway for pedestrians; increase the inventory of public art in Spartanburg; and engage with local artists while providing opportunities for collaboration, innovation, and professional development.

Engaging with the Spartanburg Community

“I’m grateful to be in this residency and thankful for the generosity of the donors and the community for making this happen. People are kind and helpful in Spartanburg. I’m also meeting wonderful artists here, and I’m looking forward to making more drawings and paintings in the next several months!” - Shuk Han

“The HUB-BUB AiR program has been a transformative experience for my practice so far. The length of it is ideal to develop and finish a project. There is tremendous support from the Chapman Cultural Center and the community at large, which breaks the stiff isolation of traditional studio life.” - Masimba
